About the Indianapolis Brass Choir

The Indianapolis Brass Choir is a large brass ensemble of musicians who volunteer their time and effort, without pay, to provide music for area churches and to aid local charities. Founded by Delbert Dale in 1986, the choir has a membership of professional musicians and serious amateurs who meet for weekly rehearsals and perform 10 to 12 concerts each year.

High-quality brass performances aid the local churches' music programs, and the freewill offering collected at concerts is given to the charity of each church's choosing. To date, the IBC has raised over $100,000 for various charities.
